Sector Watch (AI Stack)

Score describes the day: driven by the session move (70%), with breadth (avg % of the 20/50-day MAs the basket trades above, 15%) and news (15%) for texture. Relative strength (vs the Nasdaq for tech baskets, the S&P for the rest) is shown as a context column but doesn't drive the label. Sorted strongest→weakest.

Positioning & Regime

Was today bullish or bearish, read through positioning: out-of-the-money put/call volume (hedging vs chasing, daily) and short %-of-float (squeeze fuel; exchange data, biweekly) explain the character of the day's move — squeeze rebound, hedged advance, conviction selling. Under evaluation — logged daily, drives no scores.

Analyst Summary

Fed Takes Hawkish Turn Under New Chair Warsh

U.S. equities slid across the board Thursday as the Federal Reserve, under newly installed Chairman Kevin Warsh, delivered a hawkish surprise that caught markets off guard. The S&P 500 fell 1.21%, the Nasdaq 100 declined 0.99%, and the Dow dropped 507 points (-0.98%). The Fed held rates steady at 3.50–3.75% but crucially removed language signaling a bias toward future cuts, with Chair Warsh paring down the statement and reportedly withholding his "dot" from the rate outlook. Commentary from Jeffrey Gundlach underscored the shift, noting Warsh "is not going to be the 'easy money' chairman many hoped for." The 10-year Treasury yield climbed 4 basis points to 4.46%, reflecting the policy recalibration.

Tech Sector Divergence

Technology displayed sharp internal divergence. Mega-cap hyperscalers and software names sold off heavily: Meta plunged 5.44%, Microsoft dropped 3.79%, Amazon fell 3.46%, and Alphabet declined 2.43%. The SaaS sector tumbled 3.36%, underperforming the Nasdaq by over 200 basis points with only 28% breadth. In contrast, semiconductor hardware—particularly memory and domestic chip production—surged. uniQure led all gainers with a stunning 78% rally, while within the AI stack, Micron jumped 2.20%, Intel rallied 3.46% on news of a Trump-era deal to manufacture chips for Apple domestically, Broadcom advanced 4.30%, and Arm Holdings soared 5.69%. The Memory (DRAM/NAND/HBM) sector gained 2.79% with 100% breadth, though elevated put/call ratios (1.17) suggest investors remain heavily hedged despite the advance.

Biotech Surge and Cross-Asset Weakness

Healthcare and biotech dominated the day's gainers. Moderna jumped 11.55%, Biohaven rose 12.66%, and Eos Energy climbed 11.60%, pointing to idiosyncratic catalysts or sector rotation into defensive growth. Elsewhere, risk assets weakened broadly: gold fell 2.73%, crude oil dropped 1.74%, and Bitcoin declined 1.30% despite reports of a U.S.-Iran peace deal. The VIX fell 4.93%, suggesting the selloff was orderly rather than panicked. Positioning data across sectors showed low put/call ratios (0.26–0.32) in declining groups, indicating flows were not panic-driven, consistent with a repricing of rate expectations rather than a flight to safety.
